COMMENT

HE recession may not be with us officially, but the danger signs are there for all to see.

A recent spate of liquidations has centred mainly on companies heavily committed in the European tour market. However, the majority of coach operators have histories going back 25, 50, 75 or 100 years. Having been this way before they have risks spread in many baskets.

There is no substitute for a firm backbone of contract and service work which guarantees a healthy cash flow. As one operator told Coachmart: 'You won't get rich, but at least you'll stay in business.'

Flexibility of response is another survival trick. When one area of business fails, have something else up your sleeve.

By changing from a failing excursion service to extended autumn tours for the retired, a Yorkshire company has turned potential disaster into an Indian Summer. 'Bookings are looking healthy beyond Christmas,' he said.

Further north, local service initiatives have boosted turnover for a new Cleveland operator.

Introduction of traditional standards of service with clean reliable vehicles is paying dividends. Direct competition has been deflected by identification of unserved housing areas - customers let the competition go by.

This operator is looking forward to Christmas and the New Year. 'As the petrol prices shoot towards £2.50 and recession deepens car drivers will think again about going into town by car and paying silly carpark prices - it's cheaper by bus.'

Whatever the outlook, beware of the bottom line. As fuel prices lift off, so will your costs. Don't leave business decisions until it's too late.

HE recent Autobus RAI show held some worrying pre-1992 warnings for both UK operators and manufacturers.

With the British market for new buses and coaches slipping almost relentlessly since 1980 and operators' margins being squeezed harder, selling into this country is becoming less and less attractive to European manufacturers. They are now making vehicles aimed at, and only affordable by, prosperous continental operators supported by state grants.

Conversely, few UK-made coaches and buses would stand a chance of selling in any volumes in Europe. Sadly, the few that could were not displayed at RAI.

If British builders are serious - as at least two major players have said they are - about selling into Europe, surely they should set out their wares in one of the premier European shop windows.

■COMPANY CLOSURE

Almost 300 jobs likely to go at Bexleybus

TIME has run out for Selkent subsidiary Bexleybus, which is likely to close with the loss of almost 300 jobs.

The Bexleyheath garage has lost tendered routes in the area which kept 100 of its 106 buses in work. When the current contracts expire, so will the first of the London Bus companies to get its own identity and livery.

'The closure of
has not been formally announced,' said a Selkent spokesman.
'But we'd be very interested to find any way in which it can remain in operation.'

Bexleybus was one of Bexleybus: may close after losing tendered routes.

the first London Bus companies to assume its own identity, opting for a distinctive blue-andcream livery and creating headline news when it launched.

But despite having what it claims to be 'some of the most efficient working practices in the industry,' it has lost its contracts to London Central, Boro'line, Kentish Bus and Sidcup-based Transcity.

'The new contractors must be incredibly optimistic about future costs,' said Selkent managing director Bryan Constable.

The new contracts begin in 1991, and Selkent is hoping that it can meanwhile place many of the Bexleybus staff with the new operators. The vehicles, which include 32 two-door Titans, were owned by London Bus and will be reallocated.

■INSURANCE

New insurance package

COACH insurance specialist Hayman Jackson has announced its 1991 travel insurance package which it says improves three areas of cover at no extra cost.

Extra cover has been included for drivers in particular, and the policies offered include passenger insurance for up to £1 million in medical expenses abroad, cash, holiday costs and cancellation insurance, cover for vehicle breakdown, recovery and replacement, driver cover in most areas including sickness, replacement cost, personal effects and coach company documents. You can contact Hayman Jackson on 0730 68222.

Shearings opens new £3.5m centre

SHEARINGS has opened a new 7-acre maintenance site at Wigan and is inviting work from other operators.

The huge complex has everything from parking for 185 coaches, to workshops which can deal with any vehicle from a car to an articulated lorry. And now Shearings is looking for a direct return on its £3.5 million investment by taking on maintenance contracts.

That was one of the major reasons for acquiring the new site,' said Shearings operations director David Wood. The new Lockett Road site provides us with less cramped facilities than Gower Street, which will be disposed of when Lockett Road comes into operation around October 8.'

Mr Wood said the Miry Street head office remains unchanged, and there are as yet no prospects of building the engineering workforce at the new site at Bryn, just off the Wigan junction of the M6.

Facilities on the site place it among the best in Europe, with high security fencing, floodlights and electrically-operated gates. Cleaning for all parked vehicles is helped by air lines and mains sockets around the perimeter, and night cleaning is made easy by the floodlights.

Engineering facilities include a 22-bay area and ten pits, stores, full MOT facility, two spray booths, and dust-free workshops for trimming and bodywork.

■BUYOUT

Len Wright takes charge at Q Drive

Q DRIVE managing director Len Wright is to buy out the majority share of former partner David Stewart using cash from the sale of Bee Line and Alder Valley bases.

Grandforce, holding company for City of Oxford Motor Services, will get Bee Line's High Wycombe business while Drawlane, owners of London and Country, will buy Alder Valley's Guildford, Cranleigh and Woking services when the deal is rubber-stamped.

Mr Wright says the move will strengthen Q Drive without expensive borrowing, at the same time ending conflict between himself and David Stewart who have been at loggerheads for some time over the direction Q Drive should be taking.

'These transactions will not only satisfy David Stewart's objectives, but will do so without weakening the Q Drive balance sheet,' said Mr Wright.

The remaining parts of the Q Drive operation are Bee Line operations at Bracknell, Reading, Maidenhead and Newbury; Alder Valley services in Aldershot, Hindhead and Alton; the expanding London Buslines company; and the AVE Berkhof dealership.

The new direction of Q Drive promised by Len Wright includes further development of bus, coach and travel interests, and hopes of a better year for AVE Berkhof with the help of former VL-owned Yeates man David Waterman. Drawlane's acquisition of the three Surrey AV businesses should not attract the attention of the OFT or MMC,

LIQUIDATION

A L Moore boss says £50,000 would have saved company

JIM Hitchen, managing director and majority shareholder of Sleafordbased A L Moore Ltd, claims £50,000 could have saved the Lincolnshire coach company from liquidation.

Blaming low rates for Moore's demise, Mr Hitchen said: 'In the final analysis if we'd put up prices by 10 percent overall we would have been OK.'

Warning other operators, he added: 'I was getting better rates than elsewhere. Too many are asking stupid prices and we tried not to. Recently I turned down a tour to Germany for £1,100. I got twice that on our own tours.'

Moore went into voluntary liquidation this month after 55 years of operation. Mr Hitchen took control two years ago after being associated with the business since 1957.

Troubled by eight month accountancy delays, he told Coachmart: 'When we got the 1989 accounts we realised the business needed a cash injection. Turnover increased by £129,000, but there was no profit. Sadly by the time we realised the problem we could not raise the money quickly enough.

A seven day wait for the January to August 1990 financial picture and an imposed overdraft limit of £20,000 compounded the problem.

Meanwhile an eleventh hour rescue bid by German business associate Renate Onnen failed through an innocent misunderstanding. In German law liquidation can only happpen if assets are in one place.

With good intentions she funded a last Moore coach tour to her Ganderkesee hotel, near Bremen. After ensuring that the passengers could get home she kept the 12 month old leased Scania K113/Paramount and made a misguided claim that she was owed money.

Mr Hitchen jumped to Mrs Onnen's defence: 'She was wrong, but she has been one ray of sunshine.

Although her rescue attempt failed, 350 of Moore's customers have been guaranteed holidays in her German or Austrian hotels using coaches provided by her husband's coach company. Consequently only four of the 100 continental tours planned this year have been cancelled.

The A L Moore name is now lost to coaching. Eileen Barnsdale, the founder's daughter, insists that sale through liquidation is of the assets only.

■TRAFFIC CONGESTION

Badgerline's Bristol traffic plan is backed

BADGERLINE has put together a £600,000 bus lane package for Bristol which it says will save £0.78 million in the first year and will solve some of the city's congestion problems.

The 'Jam Today, Jam Tomorrow?' proposals presented in a stunning 40-page colour report have already been welcomed by Avon County Council, the city council, passengers and pressure groups.

'Congestion is a growing problem in Bristol,' said City Line managing director Graeme Varley. Operating times are becoming stretched and reliability of bus services is affected.'

Badgerline-owned City Line admits the plans will bring it direct cash benefits, but says it will plough any extra profit into vehicles and staff rather than immediately co-funding the scheme. Mr Varley pointed out that the research and the report alone have costed Badgerline around £100,000.

'If we are given better operating conditions than we have at the moment, we will get more profit. We are prepared to directly reinvest this in additional peak capacity, including bigger buses.'

Mr Varley says he does not expect a repeat of the problems of drivers parking in bus lanes: 'This could be a problem, and there will, of course, be an element of abuse, but I hope this won't be serious.

The bus lanes will be a carrot rather than a stick. Motorists alongside them will see the benefit when a bus passes them.

Light Rail Transit plans for Bristol will cost ratepayers £75 million, so the £600,000 for the Badgerline proposal is seen as a drop in the ocean by Badgerline and by pressure groups.

Plans include bus lanes, bus-activated traffic lights, and other measures such as parkand-ride - the latter having already been taken up by nearby Bath, whose council is believed to be investigating three sites near the city.

The research identified congested sites, measured traffic flow at peak times, and calculated the technical feasibility of bus priority.

SCHOOL CONTRACTS

wallow Coaches denies Ipswich school contract link

DAGENHAM-based Swallow Coaches says it had no business interest in ill-fated Swallow Travel, which operated school contracts in Ipswich for just a week before losing them.

The long-established operator, registered as Safeway Coaches Ltd, hired vehicles to an unconnected set-up in Stowmarket and was surprised when a version of the trading name appeared on its publicity material.

The partners running the firm said they thought it was a good name and thought we wouldn't mind,' said Safeway Coaches' Kevin Webb. 'We had agreed to hire them two coaches for a fortnight each, as allowed under O-licence regulations. But that was our only involvement.

Mr Webb said his company had no interest in setting up an operation in Stowmarket, or in local school bus contracts: 'Our operation is based on private hire in the London area,' he added.

The Suffolk entrepreneurs had claimed in local newspapers that they would set-up a commuter express route to London using a new Setra. They were pictured in a newsaper article with Safeway's vehicle which the caption said was theirs. They were unavailable for comment when Coachmart went to press.

The men claimed in the East Anglian Daily Times that commuters would pay up to £1,900 a year for the commuter coach run, but they did not buy the vehicle.

■NEW VEHICLE

The Elfin, the right hand drive model of the 9.2 metre Charisma: bought by Hamiltons of Uxbridge.

UK operator buys first Ensign Elfin

ENSIGN Bus Services sold the first midi version of its Yugoslavian-built Charisma coach to a UK coach operator at last week's Autobus RAI exhibition in Amsterdam.

The first right hand drive model of the 9.2 metre Charisma, called the Elfin, was bought by David Bennett for his Hamiltons of Uxbridge operation.

Mr Bennett, who already runs two full length Charismas, also ordered another two 12 metre versions at the show for delivery next March.

Ensign's Aubrey

Martin said the new vehicle would now be sold by Ensign into the UK from its Purfleet base and into the continent by its associated European sales operation in Bruges, Belgium.

The new 9.2 metre Elfin carries a price tag of £71,750 compared with the Charisma's £86,885.

Designated the S.311 by the makers FAP Famos, the Elfin is fitted with 39 seats. Power is supplied by the Mercedes OM441 engine producing 225 bhp and driving through a ZF six speed gearbox.

The rest of the specification is the same as the 12 metre Charisma, which includes full air suspension, Mercedes front and rear axles, double glazed side windows and Blaupunkt radio/cassette/PA system.

- Ensign also claims it will be selling a Famosbuilt single deck service bus in the UK by early next year. Few details are currently available, but it would be Mercedes-powered and 'competitively priced.'
- RAI report pages 21 and 23.

■ANNUAL REPORT

Stagecoach profits soar

STAGECOACH Holdings has announced profits almost 44 percent up on last year's with turnover increased by 167 percent.

Acquisitions in 1989/90 contributed to the £98.3 million turnover - just £36.7 million in 1988/89 - and produced £4.2 million profit against the previous 12 months' £2.9 million. Capital employed rose almost 20 percent from £20.65 million to £24.73 million.

'The exponential growth of last year will continue for the future but at a slower rate, as acquisition opportunities in the UK appear overpriced at the present time,' said Stagecoach chairman Brian Souter.

'Stagecoach is, however, still actively bidding on several UK companies and we are particularly excited about our new opportunities for expansion in North America.'

Shareholders saw basic earnings drop from 14.2p per share to 9.5p. Profit on turnover is around four percent... short of Stagecoach's aim of 10 percent but acceptable in the current bus industry climate.

The annual meeting will be held on October 29 at the Perth headquarters.

LIQUIDATION

Midland Fox rescues Antler holidaymakers

MIDLAND Fox coach subsidiaries have rescued the holidaymakers stranded on the Continent by insolvent Rugeley-based Antler Holidays.

The rescue operation was mounted at the parent company's expense and used coaches operated by Tellings Golden Miller, Melton Mowbray-based Fairtax and Shelton Osborn of Wollaston.

'Unfortunately Antler were not members of the BCC's bonded holiday scheme,' said Midland Fox managing director David Martin. The consequences for these stranded holidaymakers, many of whom were pensioners, were extremely serious. they were faced with full of travel home.

'As members of the BCC scheme, although with no legal requirement to provide financial and other assistence, we felt we had a moral obligation hotel bills and the costs to undertake this rescue mission for the good of the whole industry.' Mr Martin added that the coach industry had not been getting a very good press recently.

● A liquidation meeting has been called for Antler Holidays at Lichfield Civic Centre for 11 am on Thursday October 4.

A list of more than 3,000 creditors is held by P&A's liquidator Henry Hayes, but about 2,500 are would-be holdaymakers who may now lose their money. Main creditors are hoteliers.

Antler's fleet of 18 vehicles, including vehicles on lease and hire purchase, have all been re-possessed by such financiers as Close Asset Finance and Anglo Irish.

'Assets are few and far between,' said Mr Hayes. 'Whereas assets amount to a few thousand pounds, liabilities are at least £0.5 million.'

■MARKETING

Fox forms marketing division

THIS week Midland Fox formed a marketing division, Ambassador Royale, for its five coach subsidiaries.

Tellings Golden Miller, Fox Hound, Melton Mowbray-based Fairtax, Blands of Stamford and Wollaston-based Shelton Osborn will use Ambassador Royale to co-ordinate the sales and marketing activities for tours, holidays and weekend breaks.

It will sell seats on touring coaches, but will not become involved in private hire, contract and day excursion work. Subsidiary companies will retain autonomy for such work, and will continue to separately tender for local authority contracts.

Ambassador Royale has been launched with a short programme of winter breaks. Its 1991 summer brochure will be released later this year.

RECEIVERSHIP

ABTA bans Exchange holidays

ABTA has banned the sale of holidays by Exchange Travel after the 100-year-old firm was put into the hands of High Court appointed administrators Arthur Anderson.

ET's 128 outlets were closed as ABTA offered refunds to 100,000 holidaymakers. Both Co-op Travelcare and AT Mays are negotiating with Anderson to acquire part of the defunct travel company's business.

Top trio ride in RIDER Holdings, new owner of Rider (York), has appointed three people to support newly-installed managing director David Marsh.

John Dixon (44), from Tyneside, is the new operations director. He has worked in the bus industry for 17 years and previously held positions with Crosville Wales and National Express South West.

New company secretary and accountant is John Drury (31), formerly finance director with the Reynard group.

Paul McGowan (28) joins the team as the new finance director after leaving Leedsbased Yorkshire Rider where he was financial services manager.

David Marsh welcomes the new appointments. He said: We now have the senior team in place which enables us to provide the public of York with the bus services they need and deserve.

'We are looking forward to the results from the extensive market research exercise currently being carried out in the city which helps us to plan out a network of services to achieve this.'

South Yorkshire goes to High Court over MMC order

SOUTH Yorkshire Transport is to defy the Government's instruction to sell parts of its business by taking the Monopolies and Mergers Commission through the High Court.

The company accuses the MMC of operating outside of its jurisdiction, and claims its investigation targeted the wrong area.

SYT finance director Mike Pestereff said: 'After taking legal advice, the company and the South Yorkshire Passenger Transport Authority agree that the MMC report is unsound. An appeal will be in the interests of the South Yorkshire people and the bus industry as a whole.'

The appeal is an application to the High Court for leave to apply for judicial review, and was lodged with the South Yorkshire Transport: accuses MMC of operating outside its jurisdiction.

High Court a fortnight ago. It claims the MMC has jurisdiction only when 'a substantial part of the United Kingdom' is involved.

'The area investigated has only about three percent of the area and population of the UK, and four percent of the bus mileage operated,' said a spokesman. 'While these proportions are significant, they are not substantial, and the court is being asked to rule accordingly.'

An SYT spokesman was unavailable for further comment as Coachmart went to press

■MERGERS

DTi blasted over Portsmouth demerger

THE chairman of the National Federation of Bus Users says the demerging of Stagecoach's Southdown and Portsmouth CityBus is 'irresponsible.'

The divestment of CityBus - forced by the DTi - will undermine passenger confidence, reduce profits and discourage investment in new buses, says the NFBU's Caroline Cahn.

'They propose to do this even though evidence presented to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission
clearly indicated that bus users had suffered major disbenefits from the bus war which existed prior to the merger,' said Dr Cahn.

'Competition so often turns into a savage struggle for survival which damages everyone. We need sensible rules to prevent this sort of competition - for example, companies should not be allowed to change services every five minutes nor should they be allowed to register services which exactly duplicate each other.'

Portsmouth CityBus owner Southdown and its Stagecoach parent declined to comment on the impending sale of CityBus but a Stagecoach spokesman said: 'Caroline Cahn's comments have been drawn to our attention. She is not alone in her views, and many other user groups have made similar statements.'

IN COURT

Bus driver fined after police chase

BUS driver Stephen Ford (36) from Blackheath drove a single deck bus at speeds of over 40 mph through an amber traffic light in Solihull town centre while being followed by a police motorcyclist.

Warwick Crown Court heard that Ford overtook a double deck bus, causing a car to swerve to avoid a collision and then braked hard, picked up a passenger at Solihull college and continued to drive off at about 42 mph, still being followed by police officer John Gisborne.

Defending, Lee Masters said that Ford did not accept that he caused a car to swerve and he also denied crossing the amber traffic light.

He denied reckless driving but admitted a charge of careless driving and was fined £150, incurred five licence penalty points and was ordered to pay £200 costs.

■DEREGULATION

Irish calls for deregulation

IRISH independent operators are calling for deregulation of coach and bus services before 1992, and have prepared a report timed to coincide with a deregulatory bill being presented to parliament.

The report by the newly-formed Federation of Transport Operators says the Irish national bus company, CIE, collected grants of £IR 37 million in 1988, yet accumulated losses of £IR 25 million.

FOTO

It says the systems of school contract allocation - in which CIE itself decides which will be offered to independents - is unfair and is costing the Irish Government money.

'A recent report on schools contracts was a complete whitewash,' said a FOTO spokesman. 'It found that the Government was getting good value, but this isn't the case. The system is a quagmire.'

FOTO reports that CIE has saturated competitors many times, and there is no government control of anti-competitive practice. On some routes, CIE is charging less than cost with its fares, and one express coach route - Rosslare-Dublin - generates only 63 Irish pence per vehicle kilometre.

■COACH

'The round trip would generate costs of £IR 473 and revenues of £IR 200,' says FOTO's proderegulation report.

Fortunately, the Minister for Tourism and Transport, Seamus Brennan, has a European outlook,' said the FOTO spokesman. 'He is aware of our views and his reaction has been very favourable.'

He said the bill, due to be heard in the Irish Parliament next month, will propose the first radical changes to Irish transport policy since the Road Transport Act of 1932. FOTO chief executive Martin Cullen is due to meet Mr Brennan to discuss the report.

■TRAFFIC CONGESTION

Traffic talks to be held

THE Chartered Institute of Transport and the Institution of Highways and Transportation jointly host a conference on major problems of congestion at Centre Point, London, on October 29.

Roger Freeman, Minister of State for Public Transport, gives the opening address after which various speakers, including Superintendent Martin Reeve of the Metropolitan Police and Professor M van Witsen. head of development at Netherlands Railways, will talk about problems ranging from reducing congestion to improving road signs.

There will be opportunities to put questions to the speakers and to a panel chaired by Mr W Newton, chairman of London Regional Transport. Further details from Leslie Aldridge, CIT Tel:071 636 9952 or Fax:071 637 0511

BUS SERVICES

Cornish service is launched REMOTE villages close to Penzance will be joined together thanks to The Rural Development Commission. It is helping out with a bus service to a new purpose-built surgery at Marazion by offering a grant towards the first year's operation costs.

The surgery has moved from its original position in the centre of Marazion to its new location on the northern outskirts of the town. Buses used to pass by, but now the nearest bus stop is a quarter of a mile away.

LONDON PARKING

Cityrama's parking offer

LONDON-based operator Cityrama is offering 30 coach parking bays on its site... just five minutes from Victoria Coach Station.

The Silverthorne Road base - which also houses Limebourne Coaches - has been extended by taking on the lease of extra space on the British Rail-owned area near Battersea.

Parking includes the optional use of a buswash, toilet drop and servicing, with the site manned 24-hours a day. Basic rate for single vehicles on a six-month contract is £23 for up to 24 hours, the price dropping for larger numbers of vehicles. Details of the parking available are in this week's classified section of Coachmart, or by 'phoning 071 720 5971.

FIXTURES

Prizes are up for grabs

OPERATORS with vinyl graphics in their livery design could pick up a prize and prestige at the 1991 Fasson Awards.

Coach owners have until the end of November to get their livery designer or maker to nominate them for the awards, which have two categories for coaches and buses and one for minibuses.

At stake in each category is the Fasson Star Graphics Trophy and £250, with the chance to go on for a £1,000 purse and the Fasson Challenge Trophy for the overall winner.

Judging of the competition takes place in March 1991, but entries should go to Fasson UK as soon as possible using special nomination cards available from Fasson Warads, Tony Wing Associates, 30 St John's Lane, London EC1M 4BJ, Tel:071 250 0931.

Renault FRI GTX: 1991 French Coach of the Year

Renault wins in France

THE FRENCH adore... the Renault FR1 GTX which has won the 1991 French Coach of the Year Award.

Disc brakes, ABS and a highlyresistant integral body-frame steel structure are its main safety features. Its suspension, precise steering, precise steering, silent engine and comfort,were all popular with passengers.

At present, there are no plans to sell the FR1 GTX in Britain.

$N TARGET

Attractions should listen to the public

WHEN Betsy and I went to the Cadbury World preview, we were less than favourably impressed. I felt there were few samples to offset against quite a high admission charge, the demonstration 'factory' (for there is not a real factory tour) we found contrived and the historical exhibition did not have the dynamic interest which we had been led to expect.

The National Garden Festival (with Stephenson), RAF Hendon (with Churchill in its Battle of Britain > exhibition), the Imperial War Museum (in the Blitz Experience) and the National Photographic Museum at Bradford (with Lord Lichfield) have all employed the modern technique of photographically animated waxworks telling a story, with full facial movements, to a greater effect than at Cadbury

I make the comparison with the NGF, the Imperial War Museum, RAF Hendon and the Photographic Museum with some purpose as all of these attractions are large, engaging and give value for money. One is free and others are cheaper.

I am quite unrepentant

I am quite unrepentant about being critical of Cadbury World, for Betsy and I, together with other operators there at the preview, made these points to those in charge.

Seemingly they have not been acted on as passengers on both private hires and excursions are complaining bitterly about the 'attraction.'

It is bad enough when customers complain to us about our services, but far worse when they complain, regarding the services which we pass on from outsiders.

The Imperial War Museum: a good destination for coach trips.

Safety regulations must be enforced

IN this column on June 21 I expressed concern at the fact that I had suffered a spate of a certain make of speed limiter failing - and immobilising - the vehicle.

As well as being annoying and costly, I suggested that it was dangerous, if, for example, a limiter decided to lay down and die, taking the vehicle and passengers with it, in the fast lane of a motorway.

I am pleased to hear the company has in fact, taken this problem seriously and, within the next month or so, its new issue limiters will 'fail safe', i.e should they fail the vehicle will be able to be operated normally.

At least one other reader too appears to have heeded my comments for I understand that another manufacturer is being sued by an operator for costs incurred when a speed limiter failed.

The claim is for a considerable sum as the circumstances were such that the passengers had to have overnight accommodation.

So much for BSI and the kite mark of reliability! But is that standard not also supposed to apply to the installers?

I drove one of my vehicles recently and was staggered to find that it went up to 75 mph - according to the tachograph - which is way over the permitted tolerance in the speed limiter legislation.

Asking around the drivers, I discovered that this vehicle is known as 'The Flier' as it has been like this ever since the limiter was fitted.

The care, competence and compliance with BSI standards of the fitment agency has therefore to be questioned.

Police must modernise

IT has been something of a rush to get this article written in time as Betsy and I have suffered the trauma of a domestic burglary.

As anyone who has had this experience will tell, it is quite a nasty shock to get home and find that someone has broken in and rifled the place.

But, although I am full of praise for the Police, who recovered most of the stolen goods and caught the villains within five days of the event, the Police themselves do contribute to the trauma.

We, firstly, had to leave the house exactly as the criminals had left it for 24 hours - it took that long for the forensic team to come and do the fingerprinting.

This, of course, involved one of us waiting at home all day for the Scenes of Crime team to arrive.

We then both spent two hours at the police station while an officer wrote out, in longhand, a statement, 90 percent of which involved copying a typewritten list of stolen items which I had given to him.

His hand-written statement, supposed to be in my own words (which it patently is not) will then be typed up for presentation as evidence.

Most motorists have suffered the same experience at some time or another.

I can see no good reason why statements have to be written in police-ese, and the rigid insistence that they must, deter many an honest citizen from making a report to the police of any incident.

Perhaps someone can explain why it is not possible to insert into the body of the statement phrases like, 'as shown on the witness schedule attached' or 'the letter dated xx/xxx/xx from the witness attached refers'.

In matters forensic, in transport and in most form of communication the police are well abreast of technology, but their written communication systems have changed but little since the days of Peel.

I would have thought it grossly wasteful of manpower, and it is certainly traumatic for the innocent 'victims' who have to comply with this outmoded system.

Double decks get busy in Hull

EAST Yorkshire Motor Services has taken delivery of six Northern Counties double deck bus bodies on Leyland Olympian chassis as part of its vehicle replacement programme.

Chassis specification includes Cummins/ZF driveline. The bodies are 10.3 metres in length, giving capacity for 85 seated passengers and nine standees. They are fitted with many Diptac features.

The buses will operate from the main EYMS depot in Hull on two busy routes to Hessle. Managing director Peter Shipp said: 'These routes are advertised as having Diptac fitted buses and there is a no smoking request on the top deck. We are using them on one group of routes to identify passenger reaction.'

An older Bristol VR has been suitably modified to provide a spare vehicle.

Northern Counties sales and marketing director Ian Murray, are Godfrey Burley, group financial director of EYMS Group Ltd, and Ian Conyers, EYMS general manager.

Grey Green picks Volvo

GREY Green is using thirteen new East Lancs bodied single deck Volvo B10M-55s on London Regional Transport service 210 – Brent Cross shopping centre to Finsbury Park station via Hampstead Heath.

The EL 2000 design has been modified to suit Grey Green requirements for 10.3 metre length and commonality of major parts with its Alexander bodied double deck fleet.

Specified for ease of manoeuvrability in central London the short length buses include Diptac features, 41 seats and space for 19 standees. Sallon sides ansd ceiling are covered in tan, cream and white Formica with seats trimmed in brown/orange moquette.

They also feature side and rear number blinds, and a split level entrance.

Made to Measure up Regent's street

REGENT Coaches, of Whitstable, Kent, has taken delivery of its sixth Made to Measure coach.

The Mercedes Benz 609D joins two other Mercedes vehicles, a Sherpa, Talbot Express and Mazda - each completed to luxury specification.

The eight-vehicle fleet of small vehicles contrasts with Regent's fleet of 10 full-size coaches and five minibuses of two years ago. Minibuses have changed from being a sideline to the company's core business.

Run as a partnership of Conrad Regent and son Paul, the eight vehicles are used on a variety of work including private hire.

Paul Regent told Coachmart: 'Operating minibuses means I now sleep at nights and have holidays. I run the business - the business doesn't run me.'

Recalling the days of full-size coaches, he said: 'Minibuses were earning money, but the others were taking the money. The public were demanding the best but wouldn't pay for it. There are too many coaches for the work available.'

He is now adamant: T'm not going bigger. Driver turnover is reduced - there are no problems with the Ministry and turnover has remained the same and vehicle costs are less.'

UK EOS gets repeat order

AS revealed in Maintenance Diary (Coachmart 602, August 23) Clevedon Motorways not only purchased the first UK EOS, but is the first UK operator to place a repeat order.

Both coaches are used on European holiday work for London-based holiday tour company Timescape.

New task for Falklands veteran

AFTER receiving a battering as a member of the Falklands taskforce, this 1983 Leyland Tiger has been rebodied by Van Hool for a new career in 'Civvy Street'.

Edward Thomas Coaches of West Ewell, Surrey, purchased the Marshall-bodied MOD bus in 1987. The remains of the battle-damaged body were scrapped and the chassis overhauled with rebuilt 245 bhp engine.

General manager Ivan Thomas told Coachmart: 'At first we wanted Plaxton bodywork, but difficulties with product liability meant that we turned to Moseley for a Van Hool body. The chassis went to Belgium in September 1989, and the completed vehicle has just been received.'

The 53-seat Alizee bodywork is the first Van Hool in the Edward Thomas Coaches fleet. Ten years ago, several AECs were rebodied by Plaxton and the company had preferred a buy British policy.

Ivan Thomas took over after his father's death in 1973. He runs 18 coaches the new coach will be used primarily on private hire. Clevedon Motorways director Richard Langson experienced some teething troubles with the first coachgauges, air conditioning, slow operation of passenger door. Otherwise he is happy with fuel economy and mechanical reliability.

He said: 'People going on holiday deserve the best possible service which is why I have chosen to run a highspecification air-conditioned coach. The EOS meets our needs in terms of quality and reliability.'

The new coach has 53 reclining seats, centre toilet, tinted glazing and full air conditioning. It is powered by a 345 bhp DAF ATi engine coupled to a ZF 6S-150C manual gearbox. Standard safety features include front disc brakes, integral retarder and anti-lock braking.

Clevedon Motorways is based in Clevedon near Bristol and runs 12 coaches.

Ralphs updates its fleet

A NEW Volvo B10M GL with Plaxton Paramount 3500 coachwork has joined the private hire fleet of Ralphs Coaches, Slough, Berks.

Ralphs operates a fleet of 14 private hire coaches and 18 vehicles on airporthotel contracts. Keith Myers, director private hire, said: 'The fleet is 100 percent Volvo/Plaxton. We bought the new coach to update the fleet.'

Mr Myers is one of a management buyout team which took over the 30-year-old business in September, 1989. The other directors are chairman Rod Burling, managing director Pat Burke, director hotels and airports division Rod Bredbury, and director workshops Bernard Pritchard.

The new coach is to three-star specification with 53 reclining seats and Sutrak air conditioning. All Ralphs coaches incorporate air conditioning.

Have you spoken to Mildred Stonewall?

WE CAN all blame the Americans for the advent of the Breakfast Meeting - apparently The Thing for big bus companies that issue silk company ties to the top brass.

Mealstop is.

Mealstop is, however, mystified by the new Spontaneous Meeting which operators are encountering whenever they phone someone who owes them money. No sooner have you got through to the secretary, than this happens:

'Hello, is your boss in?'
'Yes. Who is calling

'It's Fred Hardup.'

A long pause ensues, during which the operator is treated to Beethoven, as performed by the Mitsubishi Microchip Orchestra.

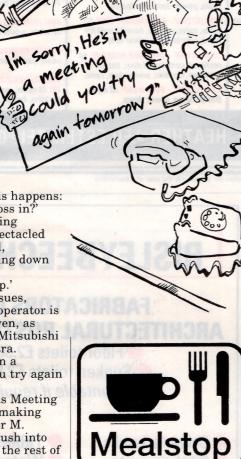

'I'm sorry. He's in a meeting. Could you try again tomorrow?'

Yes, Spontaneous Meeting has struck again, making everyone except for M. Stonewall (Miss) rush into the boardroom for the rest of the day.

Verite Baker blasted over London coach ban support

From Ray Pearson

SIR

I was saddened and somewhat disgusted by Verite Baker's attitude in her article regarding the coach ban in certain Westminster Streets (Coachmart, Issue 605). For someone who purports to have provided a service to the coach tourism industry her 'NIMBY' (not in my back yard) proclamation is shameful to say the very least.

During my time at Coachmart, Ms Baker was constantly seeking publicity for her guide services and her guide training for the very purposes she now condemns because they disturb her otherwise peaceful domicile.

With her experience of the coach industry she should realise how important it is for coach passengers to be dropped off and picked up in popular places and how difficult London already is for coach drivers especially if they are strangers to the capital, yet expected to deliver their precious loads safely and on time.

Further problems such as banning them from certain areas only add to the frustrations and headaches and will simply move the problems to somewhere else, possibly causing even greater problems.

Her attitude and that of the authority imposing the ban are reflective of the ostrich burying its head in the sand.

Coaches, or any other vehicle for that matter, fairly subject to road fund licensing and compliant with all other laws and regulations regarding their use on public roads, should have equal access to any highway and equal privilege to traverse whatever street or road the driver chooses.

Everyone has the right to live where he or she chooses too. If Ms Baker and others choose to live in Westminster they should also be prepared to accept any conditions pertinent to that area, if not move.

All are seemingly inpervious to the requirements of the local residents who find drives blocked, cars parked at all conceivable angles and doors being constantly banged.

I don't like it and as my family is grown I don't need a school on my doorstep. I accept it because it suits me to live here.

Sorry Verite, but your NIMBY attitude has destroyed the regard I may have had for you or any guide service you may still operate.

I could understand such comment from anyone not familiar with the coach and

NOSTALGIA CORNER

JEFF Grant of C & M Travel, Ormskirk Road, Liverpool, bought this 1930 Dennis Village Bus from Pat Oikle in 1989.

He said: 'Having seen it for a number of years I fell in love with it. When given first option to buy we jumped at it.'

Nevertheless the bus - valued in excess of £75,000 - is advertised for sale. 'If it doesn't go we won't be too worried.'

The 60-year-old Dennis has starred in several in films and TV, including 'Goodbye Mr Chips', 'All Creatures Great and Small', and 'Last of the Summer Wine'. However, Mr Grant considers that good returns on film contracts must be weighed against the cost of any damage rectification.

Registered OU 9286, the 22 horse power bus went into service with Robert Chisnell's King Alfred Motor Services of Winchester in August 1931. The side valve petrol engine was manufactured by White and Poppe and the 18 seat bodywork was built by Short Brothers of Rochester.

One of only six built, the village bus was used mainly in urban and city services. The driver/conductor used an ordinary cash bag and a bell punch ticket machine with wooden ticket rack.

Storage followed withdrawl in 1949 until sale to West Hill Park School in 1950. Subsequent owners included Vernons Pools before it passed into preservation.

THE BUS CENTRE

Carlyle Bus Centre Limited with its origins in the famous Midland Red Company has a unique history of building, maintaining and operating Public Services Vehicles.

Today the Bus Centre is a major supplier of vehicles and services to the UK bus industry.

Carlyle Bus Centre Limited offers a breadth of experience ideally suited to the requirements of bus operators. Products and services include:

BRITAIN'S THE POOR RELATION IN EUROPE Mark Barton reveals the industry trends coming out of the RAI show in Amsterdam.

Berkhof and Bova: taking advantage of the Government-supported Shuttle Business Bus boom in Holland, where traffic congestion is being fought with public transport.

HE good news to come out of the bi-annual Autobus RAI show last week was that innovation is alive and well within the European bus and coach manufacturing industry. The bad news is that very little of it will find its way into the UK.

On the 1989 sales performance, the UK is now only the fifth biggest market in Western Europe. Registrations of 2,640 put this country behind West Germany, Italy, Spain and France.

Furthermore, if present sales trends continue, Great Britain will slip further down the international registration's league this year. And that's without the introduction of Eastern Europe into the new vehicle market.

When sales barriers to those countries come fully down, the UK whale is in danger of turning into a relative minnow.

The reasons behind the dramatic withering of buying muscle are depressingly simple. In the face of high interest rates, the total absence of a national transport policy and lack of government funding, UK bus and coach operators cannot afford to buy sophisticated, highly developed vehicles.

And the great irony is that these are the very sort of vehicles needed to tempt the customer back onto public transport.

AUTOBUS RAI

20 t/m 24 SEPTEMBER 90 AMSTERDAM TO I

The most obvious example of this saddening Catch-22 situation at RAI was the shuttle coaches on display at the Berkhof, Smit and Boya stands. Between them, these manufacturers have sold more than 100 of these impressive purpose built commuter coaches. But none are likely to be seen on the streets in Britain.

The UK whale is in danger of becoming a minnow.

The intitiative for what is effectively a new breed of continental coach originally came from Amsterdam's Schipol airport, supported by subsidies from the Dutch Government.

Cars run by the 5,000 employees at Schipol were effectively blocking the airport. Once the commuting workers had fought their way through the congestion in Amsterdam, they then took up much of the available parking space.

If the airport was not to be strangled by the very people who ran it, something had to be done. The action taken by Schipol management was drastic, but it worked and is now being copied elsewhere in Holland: they banned workers from taking their cars to work and laid on shuttle buses instead.

Painted in a distinctive livery of tones of grey, the shuttle buses on display at RAI have been specially designed to carry commuters comfortably to work - within the time taken normally spent travelling in a car.

Each runs to a very strict timetable. There are as few stops as possible. And, most important, wherever possible they run within bus lanes and are controlled by special Vetag traffic lights.

To make the shuttles acceptable to a status-orientated nation whose workers have enjoyed tax benefits for taking their car to work, the vehicles are stylish and very comfortable.

The Berkhof variant, based on the Volvo chassised Excellence 1000 L, had 43 deluxe adjustable seats, fitted with ashtrays and an ingenious holder which moved with the bus to keep the coffee in the cup and not on the commuter's lap.

the wardrobe at the front of the bus and enjoy their coffee while listening to the radio through a personal headset or reading the morning paper provided by the specially trained driver.

According to Berkhof, 'the quality of passenger travel is determined for at least 80 percent by the driver to whom it is a privilege to be at the controls of a new Bova's and Smit's shuttle buses were specified to a similarly high standard. And, as part of the drive to make coach commuting a viable alternative to car commuting, both the Bova and Berkhof shuttles are fitted with environmentally friendly engines - DAF in the Bova and Volvo in Berkhof.

Recognising the importance of public transport in relieving its country's worsening traffic congestion, the Dutch Government is also making public money available to local authority owned bus companies to buy innovative low floor service buses. Which, as the average price of the new models on display at RAI, was around £115,000, is just as well.

Berkhof's new citybus, built in the company's Heerenveen plant, gains its entrance step height of just 227 mm by a kneeling device fitted to both the payement side air bellows.

Based on an MAN underframe, the new bus carries its air tanks and heating in the roof. This enables single glazing to be fitted, as warm air is pushed down over the windows keeping them clear.

Seats on the bus are mounted by a cantilever arrangement, which means there are no legs bolted to the floor to obstruct cleaning.

A similar arrangement also featured on the 33 seats fitted in the new Alliance citybus from United Bus member, Den Oudsten. Its strikingly large window space and low, 320 mm floor - without platforms between the entrance and exit won the vehicle many admirers at RAI and seems bound to influence future bus design.

Fellow United bus company, DAB Silkeborg, also demonstrated its ultra low floor citybus at the show. Thanks to its hydrostatic driveline, the DAB service bus has a boarding height of only 80 mm from the pavement and there are no internal steps. All the interior fittings in this bus are suspended from the ceiling.

Star of the Mercedes stand was the Avantgarde urban bus design study. The ultra modern interior of the 0405 - in shades of pink and white - was designed to offer an attractive alternative to inner city traffic chaos.

Most innovative was the on-bus information system: passengers could call up on monitors throughout the bus details of where the bus was, the route and any changes necessary.

Another concept vehicle, which draws crowds at whatever exhibition it is shown, now looks set to become a reality. Neoplan's revolutionary carbon fibre citybus is going into production and should be seen on the streets during this decade

Sadly, unless this or the next Government comes up with a coherent transport policy which allows operators to prosper, you will have to go to Europe to see it.

All there will be on show in Britain will be ageing or bog-standard buses. Plus loads and loads and loads of cars - most of them stationary.

• There will be a full report on all the new service buses at RAI in the next issue of our sister magazine, Bus Business, due out the week ending October 6.

lew developments are revealed at

ONE new vehicle unveiled at RAI Amsterdam that should be seen on the streets of Britain is DAF Bus' new medium weight coach underframe.

The SB2700HS will be coming off the production line at Eindhoven at the beginning of 1991.

Effectively replacing the SB2300DHS, the underframe will be powered by a new 8.25litre engine, which, helped by DAF's ATi (Advanced Turbo intercooling) technology, produces 272 bhp at 2,400 rpm.

The new engine is the first of a range of low-pollution DAF power plants to be fitted in a coach underframe. The so called 9 NOx engines were launched for buses earlier this year.

DAF Bus also used RAI to introduce a new dashboard, now being fitted to the new SB2700, the SB3000, SB2300 and MB230 coach underframes. Main feature is an electronic warning system (SWS), which monitors up to 30 vehicle functions. Any defect is immediately indicated by two lamps and an audible signal.

SB3000 underframes are now also available with a new 354 bhp KS engine and integrated secondary retarder on the manual gearbox.

Boya launched a 10 metre version of its Futura at RAI, fitted with 42 seats. The United Bus subsidiary also introduced a range of new luxury seats of its own design. One version on show at RAI was even fitted with a pocket sized TV extra seats, plus another guide's seat next to the driver, to be fitted.

However, problems with axle weights look likely to rule out the 2000HLE for British operation - unless it is to built on a three axled chassis.

The new Excellence was shown with Berkhof's new instrument panel, now standard equipment on all Excellence models, except the 500 series.

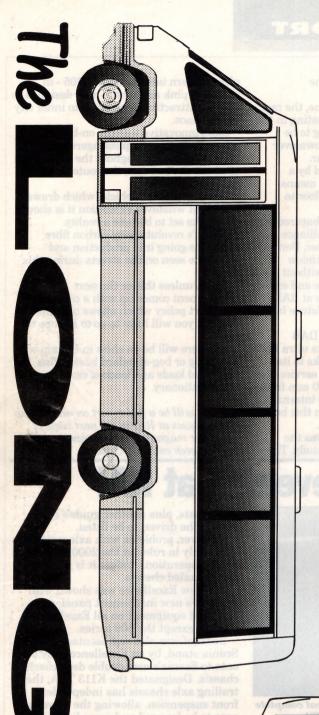

Berkhof was also represented on the Scania stand, by an Excellence body built onto to Scania's new double deck coach chassis. Designated the K113 TLA, the trailing axle chassis has independent front suspension, allowing the driver's area to be lowered and providing a low centre aisle behind the driver.

Scania also used Autobus RAI to show a new seven speed gearbox with one extra low ratio for smooth 'inching' and equiped with 'comfort shift' to allow a gear changing shift similar to that of a car. At present the new gearbox, designated the GR801, is only available on the Scania three-axle K-series chassis.

The new Elfin 9.2 metre coach from Ensign Bus Services, the only British company selling coaches at RAI, could soon be joined in European operators' fleets by a stylish midicoach from Yugoslavian builder Automontaza.

The MAN engined AM 180T was being shown in Amsterdam for the first time as a prelude to selling in Europe.

SMALL IS BEAUTIFUL

Reducing fleet size to make more money is a brave strategy, but Kevin Mannion found the move presented an unexpected bonus... he has more time to plan profitable business opportunities. Mike Morgan reports.

FTER struggling against the conflicting interests of ambition and reality for five years, Mannion Coaches abandoned fleet expansion plans and cut down to three vehicles.

The original plan was to expand by one vehicle a year, but owner Kevin Mannion said: 'I was having no time off.'

Caught in a tightening spiral of activity familiar to a large number of operators, Kevin saw the light two years ago.

He was chasing school contracts, finding drivers, repairing coaches and grasping at private hire jobs.

Contract work was worthwhile in the early days. Mannion Coaches was created out of a small haulage business started with a £250 van, with a minibus then being added on a restricted licence.

Realising that coaches were doing better, Kevin faded out the vans and a 53 seat coach was purchased.

Kevin recalls: 'At that time everything was on contract at rates close to contract work today. When you look at diesel and other costs it doesn't make sense.'

Much of the private hire work taken on at this time was awarded on price and consequently brought with it some undesirable jobs. Refering to 'stag night' trips to Bridlington he queried: 'Why do it? All you get is a bad name. The Police don't want you, and you're left to clean sick out ready for the next morning's contract.'

MANNION

A discriminating market should be prepared to pay sensible rates for a quality service with clean coaches.

Steam cleaning seats is a regular part of Mannion Coaches' attention to presenting the right image, but abuse of vehicles by unappreciative customers clearly offended Kevin's sensibilities.

Talking of his coaches he said: 'I treat them as my own property. All you can do is have a clean, spotless coach. You will want back those who respect it, but others can be turned away.'

The profit implications of this assessment were soon appreciated. If operators insist on selecting customers, then a discriminating market should be logical conclusion being: 'It's hard work, but you're better off than accepting low prices.'

Cultivating the right market requires business planning - this is now the hard work, rather than working on vehicles and disciplining reluctant drivers. For one thing he now knows his costs and can confidently claim: 'The first vehicle covers standing costs and the second vehicle covers profit.'

Taking his business philosophy further, Kevin addressed future expansion prospects: 'Only put money back if there's a return on it. You don't have to put money into coaches. If it doesn't pay then it can go into something else'

Return on capital invested may not be his only criteria. Coaching has that fatal charm which encourages considerations beyond pure business calculations: 'If you didn't enjoy it you wouldn't do it.'

Nevertheless choice of vehicles is based on pragmatic decision-making: 'We like to buy a coach, run it, and sell it for what it cost.' Wishful thinking? Not when you look at the Mannion fleet.

Pride and dedicated attention to detail ensure pristine presentation. For example a 1977 Plaxton Supreme bodied AEC Reliance had worked for two years without complaint. True a new radiator had been fitted to allay fears of overheating, but its reliability cautioned against a large investment in a replacement.

Consequently the AEC received a £1,000 facelift. New Paramount lower front and Supreme Mk V rear were fitted. All side panels were renewed and the completed coach spray painted to a very high standard in twin-pack acrylic using Royal blue as a base colour with white and red relief. This livery reversed an earlier scheme replaced because so many other companies use white as a base colour.

Internally the AEC has been refloored and retrimmed by Shades of Filey. It was only the retrim of seats which was contracted out - all other work being done in-house.

Conveying the right image is all-important...and can lead to better hire rates.

Workshop/garage facilities allow storage for the company's combined vehicle resources. A second full-size coach is a 1981 MAN SR 280, and a 1982 Mercedes Benz mini-coach completes the PSV fleet. Two other vehicles of interest are a jack-of-all-trades Honda pick-up and a Daimler hire car.

Property is rented in an industrial area close to Leeds Wellington Street coach station. Kevin admitted he would like to purchase the property so that its outward appearance could be smartened-

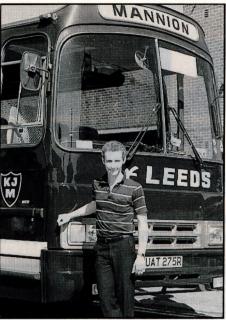

Potential customers doubting the suitability of his rolling stock are invited to the garage for reassurance, but on the positive side this industrial location avoids aggravation from domestic residents, and is not prone to attacks of vandalism.

The MAN is utilised primarily on continental tours. These tours are Mannion Coaches' own programme expanded and devised with the benefit of managerial time freed from the frantic days of contract work.

Å nine-day tour to Austria, together with other work, will see this coach across the water for 27 days during September.

Experience with the tours programme has not always been sweet. What cripples is the advertising costs for a small operator working in the same market as large companies. Then it becomes too expensive to compete. We slipped-up on an Amsterdam weekend priced at £69. This clashed with W H Smith doing a mid-week trip for £49.'

The lesson was to go for top quality. A minimum three star rating is expected of hotels, selected so that people who go will enjoy themselves and, most significantly, come back. Where optionals are available, then the cost is specified in advance.

Kevin Mannion: 'You don't have to put money into coaches. If it doesn't pay then it can go into something else.'

Mannion Coaches' tours and excursions leaflet clearly identifies the type of customer wanted. A three-night New Year tour to Scotland being geared to clients able to appreciate the more cultural aspects of Hogmanay.

Kevin's aversion to contracts does not extend to a five days per week six year social services contract. This gives better vehicle utilisation than term time schools contracts, which were not even tendered for this year. He explained: 'There's no point in chasing work where there's no return. Besides, all Metro contracts in West Yorkshire are for 12 months, and you can't plan anything on that basis.

The Mercedes minicoach used on the contract is another case of a vehicle which logically ought to be due for replacement, but this move has been delayed because it is so reliable. Free of contract at weekend, the minicoach supplements the AEC on private hire work - another area where Kevin believes three is better than five: 'The extra vehicles required extra drivers for weekends.' Part-time employees being a source of discontent.

He is also critical of operators who grab weekend work at any cost. 'Weekend work should be at premium rates in this area.' Mannion Coaches is successful in sticking to realistic quotes.

Summer weekends create a vehicle shortage in the West Yorkshire connurbation and the going rate can be pumped up accordingly. 'Last minute bookings haven't a lot of option.'

Another line in weekend earnings comes from wedding car hire. The white Jaguar XJ6 doubles as Kevin's private car, but can do up to two weddings a weekend at £140.

No point in chasing work where there's no return.

On rare occasions this is tied to a request for coach hire, but few clients are prepared to match a minimum charge of £150 to cover the opportunity cost of a lost trip to the coast.

With a maximum driver requirement of four matched by Kevin, his father, brother Michael and a full time employee, there is no staffing problem.

Michael Mannion is a full-time fireman able to relieve Kevin from work in the office on his rest days. An acknowledged computer buff, Michael has adapted Amstrad software to prepare tour costings, worksheets, invoices and other routine admin functions

He would like to come into the business full-time, but that requires expansion first and would present the dilemma of taking work for the sake of it.

The immediate concern surrounds making things as cost effective as possible, and then putting rates up as much as possible. During summer months expectations of higher rates are realistic, but the whole spectrum of work is receiving careful attention.

Kevin said: 'With three coaches I have more free time to look at different ideas and other ways of making money. Other firms are just running round in a muddle. I've been in that situation myself. It's better to think forward, but that requires time.'

Specific attention is being paid to what he describes as 'separate seat jobs' organising own tours. He believes there is scope for small operators working with small hoteliers to put rates up so that both stop complaining about low rates

Kevin consistently points to a number of ironies in the coach industry. Seatbelts and speed limiters are regarded as ironic consequencies of inadequate driver training and low wages.

In Kevin's view it is much better to aviod the accident in the first place, but ironically it all comes back to the rate for the job. Perceptively he observed: 'New coaches tend to reduce drivers' wages'

Until rates are increased his attitude to vehicle replacement remains: 'If you can't get enough to buy new buses then

The white Jaguar XJ6 doubles as Kevin's private car, but can also do up to two weddings a weekend at £140.

cut your cloth accordingly. What passengers want is a bus that is clean and will carry them around in comfort to me the AEC fits the bill. I would love a new coach with toilet and video, but it has to be justified.'

Meanwhile coaching earns Kevin a decent living. He has no vehicles on finance. This in turn reduces standing costs to £25 per day per vehicle, removing the pressure to take on work for the sake of it.

LEGAL NEWS

■ NEW regulations have been announced to improve the rates appeals procedure.

Local Government Minister
Michael Portillo said the procedure will enable proposals for an alteration to the new rating list to be made, not only by the company which owns or occupies the property, but also by the parent company or another member in the same group.

He said: 'It will also be possible to submit single proposals covering more than one property in the same building.

'In addition, the regulations will allow, in limited circumstances, for invalid proposals to be re-submitted. A proposal must be made within six months of the start of the new rating list or a material change of circumstances.

'This means that if it is declared invalid, there may be little or not time for it to be re-submitted. The new rules will allow a proposal to be re-submitted if that time limit has expired.

'A proposal can only be resubmitted once, but if the ratepayer and valuation officer still cannot agree on its validity, it will remain open to other parties to refer the matter for determination by a Valuation Court and Community Charge Tribunal.'

The regulations were due to come into effect on September 27.

■ A DTp survey reveals virtually everyone recognises the need for traffic control and more than half want stricter enforcements or additional regulation.

The research, carried out by the Transport Studies Unit at Oxford University, was designed to reveal public understanding of the purpose of traffic regulations and parking controls in urban areas.

It covered the following main areas:

- Waiting and loading restrictions;
- Parking controls;
- Access restrictions;
- Reserved lanes;
- Pedestrian facilities;
- And restrictions on movements at junctions.

Christopher Chope, Minister for Roads and Traffic, said: 'Coping with traffic and parking demands is not easy. Restrictions and regulatons are inevitable.

'This report suggests that there is widespread public support for many measures. This is more likely to be forthcoming when there is proper consultation and understanding of the need for them.'

Company director (78) saves the day

SOUTH Wales traffic commissioner Mr John Mervyn Pugh has praised a 78-year-old company director for 'saving the day' at a hearing into the firm's maintenance record.

He said Mr Harold Evans had dispelled worries over the running of Evans Coaches Ltd, of New Tredegar, a company Mr Evans' father had founded 70 years ago.

Mr Ian Evans appeared to ignore vehicle examiners' advice.

But Mr Mervyn Pugh cut the duration of the company's 20-vehicle PSV licence so it now expires at the end of November, instead of in 1992 and directed that a further fleet inspection takes place before the licence fell for renewal.

In July the commissioner prohibited the company from operating local services of any description and directed that it repay 20 percent of the fuel duty rebate grant it had received over the previous three months, following complaints from Mid Glamorgan County Council about the way it had been operating its registered services.

At the same hearing, Mr Mervyn Pugh adjourned consideration of disciplinary action over the company's maintenance record, because he wanted to hear evidence from Mr Harold Evans, the father of director and transport manager Mr Ian Evans (Coachmart, July 26).

When the hearing was resumed, Mr Mervyn Pugh said the maintenance of the company's vehicles had deteriorated over the past few years.

He was considering the issue of a total of 14 prohibition and variation notices, some of which had been endorsed 'neglect'.

Mr Harold Evans said he had passed over the management of the company to his son, Mr Ian Evans, five years ago.

He had not realised until the present hearing that the company's good repute was at risk as a result of the present proceedings and he was present to defend that repute.

Mr Mervyn Pugh said the evidence at the July hearing had been pretty damning and showed quite clearly that since the company was handed over to Mr Ian Evans, things had gone down.

He had adjourned that hearing because he did not want Mr Evans Senior to lose his good repute without having an opportunity of giving evidence before him.

He had the impression that Mr Ian Evans had 'taken umbrage' at the last hearing, challenging everything that was said to him. Vehicle examiners had endeavoured to give him advice, which it appeared he had ignored.

Mr Harold Evans said he still took an active daily part in the business and he assured the commissioner that he would see to it that the system of maintenance recommended in South Wales was put into effect.

Asked if Mr Ian Evans was capable of carrying out the instructions, Mr Harold Evans said that he thought so.

Curtailing the licence, Mr Mervyn Pugh said he was glad he had decided to adjourn the proceedings in July, as otherwise the good repute of a doyen of the coach industry since 1921 would have been lost for ever.

There were two aspects he had to consider. Firstly, the prohibition notices and, secondly, he had to be satisfied that the future planned maintenance was satisfactory and that the system was working.

In allowing the company to continue to operate, he had to be satisfied that the vehicles would be safely maintained at all times.

He wanted to dispel any impression that he disliked Mr Ian Evans, said Mr Mervyn Pugh. Mr Ian Evans was treated like any other operator and personalities had not come into the decision he had made.

In the short time Mr Harold Evans had given evidence, he had dispelled worries and had cleared up one or two points that Mr Ian Evans had every opportunity of doing, but which he had not taken up. Mr Harold Evans' words of wisdom had saved the day.

Commissioner did not dislike Mr lan Evans. He was treated like any other operator.

Mr Harold Evans had spoken the truth and with pride. He needed to rely upon Mr Harold Evans to help Mr Ian Evans implement and take on board the recommended maintenance system. He was trying to help Mr Ian Evans, and if he had been verbally chastised it was rightly so.

Directing that a further fleet inspection take place before the company's licence fell due for renewal, Mr Mervyn Pugh said the renewal application would be considered at a further public incuity.

Provided there were no further prohibition notices which constituted a danger to the public, or which indicated neglect, between now and that hearing, the licence would be renewed for the full five years.

However, if there were any defects leading to the issue of such prohibitions, he would not be in a position to renew the licence and no end of mitigation would persuade him otherwise.

Mr Harold Evans had been an operator for a long time and he could not give a stronger warning than that, said Mr Mervyn Pugh.

Redferns of New Mills loses operator's licence

REDFERNS of New Mills Ltd has had its PSV operator's licence revoked after failing to appear at a Manchester public inquiry.

Its transport manager, Mr George David Rawson, has also been disqualified indefinitely from holding or obtaining a licence. North Western traffic

North Western traffic commissioner Mr Martin Albu said the company was either unwilling or unable to meet the standards required of a responsible PSV operator.

The company had been called to the public inquiry because of an unsatisfactory report from the DTp's vehicle inspectorate concerning the maintenance of its vehicles.

It declined to attend, but responded by a letter from its solicitors.

Mr Albu said the company was the successor to C H Redfern Ltd, a company which had held a licence for many years before going into voluntary liquidation.

Mr George David Rawson was a director and the transport manager of C H Redfern Ltd and he was also the transport manager and in effective control of Redferns New Mills Ltd, of which his father Mr George J Rawson was a director.

C H Redfern Ltd came to the attention of the vehicle examiners on a number of occasions and was called to a public inquiry in 1986 and again in 1988.

The new company apparently continued to trade on the basis of the existing licence, and using some of the same vehicles, until that licence was revoked at a public inquiry in June 1989 because of vehicle maintenance problems (Coachmart, July 6, 1989).

In January 1989 Redferns of New Mills Ltd made application for a new licence. That application was also considered at the public inquiry in June 1989.

Mr Albu said he was concerned about the new company's financial standing and maintenance arrangements at that time, and he granted it a licence for a six months period only.

Redferns of New Mills subsequently applied to increase the authorisation on the licence from four to five vehicles, and that was considered, together with an application to renew the licence, at a public inquiry in February.

Passenger alleged vehicle broke down and interior was in a dirty condition.

Because of doubts about the company's financial standing, and because of continuing maintenance problems, he revoked the existing licence and granted the company a new licence for four vehicles only to expire at the end of February 1991.

In his decision, he had said he was extremely concerned by the evidence about the condition of the company's vehicles. He had noted the steps Mr Rawson had said he was taking to remedy the situation, and he warned that he might have to consider further action against the licence if any more prohibition notices were issued to the company's vehicles.

He strongly advised the company to arrange for regular safety checks to be carried out on its vehicles by a reputable outside agency (Coachmart, March 15).

Since February, two Redfern vehicles had attracted prohibitions, one vehicle having been prohibited twice. Two other vehicles examined, though roadworthy, had been given defect notices.

The vehicle examiner reported that the company's maintenance facilities were adequate for the size of the operation.

Records supported the claim that monthly inspections were being carried out, but that was not reflected in the condition of the vehicles.

In the examiner's opinion, lack of finance prevented the company following the advice given to have its vehicles inspected by an outside

Mr Albu said that in May a letter was received from a passenger on a coach trip on a vehicle supplied by Redferns, alleging that the radiator had boiled and the vehicle come to a stop on several occasions during the journey. The writer also commented that the interior of the vehicle was dirty.

Redferns' solicitors had written claiming that there had been no substantiated complaints from customers concerning the company's vehicles or any serious accidents involving its vehicles.

History of inadequate vehicle maintenance, warning letters and public inquiries.

It was maintained that safety was not neglected for the sake of economy. It was also said that the business was on the market for sale.

The company said that one of the prohibited vehicles had been examined when it was off the road for repairs, including a new cylinder head gasket and that accounted for the excessive smoke and the oil leakage as well as the dirty interior. The other matters were not considered major safety items.

Mr Albu said that though those comments were consistent with the allegation made in the complainant's letter in May, it left unanswered the question as to whether the vehicle should have been allowed to get into such a condition that it broke down on the road.

The solicitor's letter referred to a prohibition for a partly worn tyre. In fact the prohibition notice clearly stated that the tyre was worn below the legal minimum. That should have been noticed before the vehicle went out on the road.

An undertaking that 'the wheel would have been changed immediately' was not sufficient.

The company challenged the significance of five defects noted on a delayed prohibition issued in June, said Mr Albu. However, there was no suggestion that those defects had previously been noted or that any action had been planned to deal with

The company also questioned the suggestion that maintenance records did not reflect the true condition of the vehicles.

Finally, Redferns' solicitors stated that the company employed a full time mechanic to maintain four vehicles, that it took its obligations to the public seriously and that all its vehicles were now in good order.

Revoking the licence, and disqualifying Mr Rawson, Mr Albu said that Redferns of New Mills and its predecessor company were both effectively under the control of Mr G D Rawson.

There had been a history of inadequate vehicle maintenance, warning letters and public inquiries. After each inquiry some temporary improvement had occurred but the position had then again rapidly deteriorated.

The warning given in February had been quite clear and specific. It contained advice that the company had apparently chosen to ignore.

Despite that warning, a vehicle was found on the road in April with an illegal rear tyre, in May a vehicle was sent on the road in what was clearly an unroadworthy condition and in June numerous further defects were found on the company's vehicles during a fleet check.

The only possible conclusion was that the company was either unwilling or unable to meet the standards required of a responsible PSV operator.

PSV licence cut

MR PETER Ellis - trading as Ellis Coaches, of Dorking, Surrey - has had the duration of his PSV licence cut and the number of authorised vehicles reduced.

Metropolitan traffic commissioner Air Vice Marshal Ronald Ashford said at a public inquiry that after considering all the evidence before him, he was prematurely expiring Mr Ellis' licence in 2.5 months time and was cutting the authorisation from two vehicles to one.

Disciplinary action taken

DISCIPLINARY action has been taken against the PSV operator's licence held by Mr D Russell - trading as Amberline of North End, Portsmouth.

Revoking an application to renew Mr Russell's international licence to run four vehicles, South Eastern traffic commissioner Brigadier Michael Turner instead granted him a fresh licence for two vehicles for a period of one year.

Brigadier Turner told an Eastbourne public inquiry that his decision should not take effect until the time in which an appeal could be made to the Transport Tribunal had elapsed, or any such appeal had been determined.

Border campaign is launched

THE latest edition of 'Britain's Border Country Breaks' brochure is now available.

Since its launch three years ago, the promotion has helped sell a wide-choice of holiday opportunities in the regions of Cumbria, Dumfries and Galloway, Northumbria and the Scottish Borders.

Centuries of common heritage bind the lands between Solway Firth and the Northumbrian Coast, and the brochure illustrates a host of visitor attractions and accommodation of all types.

More than 50,000 of the brochures - promoted by the four regional and area tourist boards, councils and other agencies - are being distributed.

Elizabeth Curtis, Cumbria Tourist Board's marketing and travel trade officer, said: 'Last year's promotion proved very popular. We hope that even more people will discover this fascinating region with the help of this new brochure.' You can contact Elizabeth on 096 62 4444.

Enjoy Christmas in a regal setting

CHRISTMAS will soon be upon us and an ideal venue for a Yuletide event is The Queen's House at Greenwich.

The House - recently subject of a £5 million refurbishment and renovation - is available to groups of varying numbers having already hosted parties for up to 100 guests.

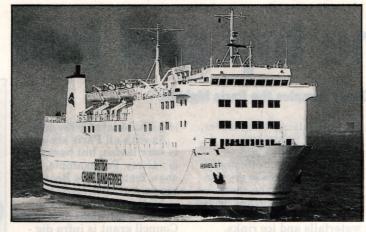

The Seventeenth Century Inigo Jones-designed Palladian villa will be decorated in traditional Christmas style to create a special seasonal atmosphere.

A variety of entertainment can be provided including harpsichord music, baroque opera, stilt walkers, jugglers and laser displays.

Catering can range from finger buffets to five-course gourmet dinners.

The Queen's House is linked to two wings of the National Maritime Museum and includes three areas which can be used separately or combined.

Channel Island Ferries' Havelet has been given a £2 million refit

Enjoy a break in the Channel Islands

GUERNSEY and Jersey are ideal destinations for an autumn break.

British Channel Island Ferries has linked with several of the islands' hotels to offer two and seven day breaks from September to December.

The two day breaks start from £59 per person in September and October and drop to £49 per adult in November and December.

Accommodation is in rooms with a washbasin and on a bed and breakfast basis, but private facilities and half board are available for a small supplement.

British Channel Island Ferries - which operates out of Poole - can also offer quick excursions to the islands.

Guernsey Hoppers cost £15 return and Jersey Minicruises £19 return.

Copies of the company's brochure can be obtained by ringing 0202 681155.

Jersey: one of the many picturesque farms tourists can visit.

Tourism cash boost

INCOME from tourism has risen by four percent in the East Midlands over the past year.

East Midlands Tourist Board says there has been an increase in overseas visitors to the region, especially from Northern Europe, and a rise in short breaks.

The board has held various activities during the last year aimed at developing, marketing and promoting tourism.

These have included domestic and overseas advertising campaigns, visiting foreign travel fairs, and issuing new tourist publications.

For more details, contact the East Midlands Tourist Board on 0522 531521.

Brush up your language skills

COACH operators wishing to improve their foreign language skills may be interested in a new series of cassette-based learning tapes out this autumn.

Under the overall title of TOPIK, each 60 minute cassette will provide listening practice for business people.

The course is aimed at people who know the basics of a foreign language and kicks off with a series on French

Each cassette will feature native speakers discussing a variety of topics and will be accompanied by a transcript of the spoken material.

Other languages to be covered include German, Italian, Spanish and Russian. The first cassette is available at £3.95 with subsequent ones costing £4.95 from Eleven Genesis, 45 Sherwood Avenue, St Albans, Herts AL4 9QJ.

Tourists will flood to the Thames Barrier

BUS and coach operators in the London area on October 7 should visit the Thames Flood Barrier which will be raised for the day to test the effects of a full tide. The ten steel gates raise at 8.10am and come down at 8.10pm the same day.

The water level at London Bridge has always been high and is rising at a rate of 75cm(2.5ft) each century due to a combination of the melting of the polar ice caps and the tilting of Britain towards Europe.

Members of the public are not permitted to walk along the barriers, but the Thames Barrier Visitors Centre is open seven days a week at the south end just off the A206 Woolwich road between Greenwich and Woolwich.

The centre offers a range of facilities including a self-service cafeteria, function room, evening carvery, toilets, schools centre and FREE coach parking.

The centre also has boat trips running from Westminster, Tower, and Greenwich piers around the barrier when then gates are closed.

Over the top and just great!

Rod Davey samples the Paris highlife.

PARISIAN nightlife is over the top. Be it my favourite watering hole in 'forbidden Paris' around the Moulin Rouge near Monmartre, or the Lido on the Champs-Elysees, there is nothing quite like it.

Paris has to be Paris to keep ahead of its imitators. And the venue which describes itself as 'the most famous nightclub in the World', the Lido, is no exception to the rule and has a brand new show.

Still featuring the topless Bluebell Girls, its lavish new review features the latest in stage technology.

Decorated by Italian designer Bartoccini, the theatre has 1,200 seats, 150 speakers through a 32channel mixing desk, lasers, fibre-optic lights, two orchestras and golden scenery - which is 15 storeys high and changes every two minutes during the show. A team of 35 technicians brings forth dance floors, pools, waterfalls and ice rinks.

No less than 3,000 people prepared the new review which has four main scenes separated by speciality acts such as jugglers and acrobats.

The first scene involves the 'cult of the body' complete with startling laser-light costumes, the second the lost world of the Incas, the penultimate Indiana Jones complete with helicopter over the auditorium, and a finale of dance and jazz with water iets illuminated with gold.

As with all Paris shows it is very lavish, but basically it is variety. For example, the show features The Beatles' music, but with operatic sets.

All this must mean the French equivalent of an Arts Council grant is infra dig and most shows cost in excess of £40 without dinner. But it certainly will make Paris more memorable for your clients, especially as the Lido throws in a bottle of champagne.

The Lido is on the Champs-Elysees near the Arc de Triomphe, and offers a variey of 'exclusive' prices depending on menu and size of group. All tables must be reserved by telephoning (1) 45 63 11 61.

HOSPITALITY COACH

EX LONDON TRANSPORT ROUTEMASTER DOUBLE DECKER COACH

This Routemaster coach RMA19 has undergone a totally professional overhaul and conversion into a luxury hospitality coach/mobile home at a cost in excess of £60,000.

This coach was completed in 1989 and had a detailed mechanical rebuild, from stem to stern, engine, gearbox (plus spare) rear axle and differential, (high speed diff) brakes, power steering, starter and alternator, tacho, fluid flywheel, new shocks, king pins, water pump, diesel pump, radiator, hoses, new tyres with 2 spare wheels.

The body was fully overhauled and stripped to bare metal and repainted in two pack into London Transport colours of red and cream.

Internally, the coach has been fitted with every facility, totally rewired, new fluorescent lighting, 240 volt 2.2KV diesel generator, twin independent 24 volt, plus a 12 volt battery systems, a thermostatically controlled diesel hot air heating system ducted to both decks, 60 gallons fresh water, and waste drop tanks, toilet and wash basin, hot water heater, 4 x radios and a colour TV on each deck, sinks on both decks, TV cameras for rear view, also a camera on the roof to check on low bridges.

The internal comforts include, lower deck, a full kitchen with 4 hob hotplates, fridge, microwave, cupboards, matching crockery, cutlery, glasses, pots, pans and club seating with tables for 8 people. The upper deck has front facing viewing seats, lounge couches, and a rear lounge that turns into a bedroom, a shower, cupboards, 3 x individual sunroofs, and curtains on all windows, with all seating and the ceiling decor utilising the latest Holdsworth Yorkshire moquette, with fitted carpeting (and acoustic foam underlay) in matching colours. Even a hoover is aboard to keep it all tidy

Yours for only £40,000 ono
